“ Before I came along, you earned your wings and soared the skies above. When I tell people that I was born to fly, I mean it literally and tell the story of how I was in the air before the day I was born. Once I made my entrance, you retired your wings and hit the ground running going full speed as a wife, mother and friend. The best lesson you taught me was to try. You tried everything and if it didn't work out the first time, you just tried again and again. You never stopped trying. You never stopped loving and you never stopped caring. You weren't perfect, but you were perfect for me. Now you have earned another set of wings, this time to soar the heavens. You made your mark and you will be missed greatly every day. Now you are indeed perfect, and not just for me. Everyone whose lives you touched are lucky to have such a beautiful angel watching over them. I love you forever mommy!
