“ Joel Lee Miller had a profound talent for building or repairing anything. He continually made jokes about everything. He always stated that he loved to lie or tell stories. He took nothing in life seriously. Family was his greatest desire, along with a sense of belonging. He loved bowling, baseball, basketball and golfing in his younger days. Joel loved to watch boxing and his favorite boxer was George Foreman. He never worried about anything and was an eternal optimist. He lived his life on his own terms always. He felt very strongly about Judaism and could read, write and speak Hebrew fluently. He passed away suddenly and peacefully of Stage Four Multicellular Lymphoma.
