““Good Morning, Beautiful!” These were the three words I woke up to almost every day for nearly three years. That was the perseverance that Zane had when he truly wanted something. Ultimately, it was the final factor in my decision to be his girlfriend. During that conversation, I told him that being with me was a death wish because everyone dies around me and the reason I ran from him for all those years was because I couldn't bare the thought of him being hurt. He told me if he could just hold me one more time, he'd die a happy man. I may not have seen him the longest or spent the most time with Zane. But I got the best version of him and those last couple of days, bloomed a man who had a great new job he was about to begin the very next day. He stood proud wearing his safety gear and showed me his safety certificate where he passed his exams with flying colors. He looked at me and said this was the first day of the rest of our lives and he hoped I wanted to spend the rest of mine with him. Less than 6 hours later, he was gone. If Zane would've wanted any one thing to be his lesson to the living in his death, it would be this: cherish your loved ones in life, love when it's hard to love, forgive when it seems impossible to do so, and help others who need you without the thought of what's in return. I love you Zane Cole Lucas. I will cherish our memories and I'll never forget all the things you taught me and showed me. You are at peace now and I look forward to being right there beside you when it's my time.

“ Much to young to be taken when so many new plans for the future Zane had. Lord give his family the extra love and care needed in Zanes absence. And to his girlfriend Brittany a embrace of your strong arms to give her the ability to move on slowly but surely in her life.
